Feed the Birds

We're getting ready for the Big Garden Bird Watch, so we've been making bird feeders. We recycled some plastic bottles and with a bit of string and teamwork, we made these – what do you think? We hope they will attract some more birds into our school grounds.

You can watch birds from all sorts of places – the secret is to be quiet and still.

We've been finding out more about birds, their nests and how they feed. You can find lots of information and activities on the RSPB website https://www.rspb.org.uk/

Did you know that you can use the ice that has formed in a tyre to make part of your marble run? Neither did we till we tried!

Making origami birds is harder that it looks – how did we do?

What do you think of this abstract bird art? What a clever use of resources!

We love inspiring each other – have a look at our bird poems.

There is no end to our resourcefulness when it comes to making homes for bird. How do you like these creations?

At this time of year, if you look closely, you might find the tiniest pink flower on a hazel tree. This will grow into a hazel nut. See if you can spot one when you're out and about.

In the mud kitchen we rustled up some birdy treats – worm pie, anyone?
